Constellation Completes Acquisition of Digital Arts and Sciences Corporation

TORONTO, ON, NOVEMBER 30, 2012 – Constellation Software Inc. (“Constellation”)(TSX:CSU) announced today that its wholly owned subsidiary, Volaris Group (“Volaris”) has completed the acquisition of Digital Arts and Sciences Corporation (“DASC”), the parent company of Gallery Systems, Inc. (“Gallery Systems”). The acquisition is Volaris’ first investment in the Cultural Collections Management vertical. The execution of the acquisition agreement was previously announced on November 16, 2012.

Gallery Systems is a vertical market software provider delivering cultural collections asset management and Web publishing software solutions to museums, corporate collections, private collections and education institutions. The company’s TMS and EmbARK collections management systems streamline all aspects of collections and exhibitions management and provide improved information control and accountability. In addition, Gallery’s eMuseum Web publishing toolkit provides an interactive, virtual tour of collections online.

Founded in 1981, Gallery Systems now counts more than 700 clients among its customer base worldwide, including The Metropolitan Museum of Art, The Museum of Modern Art, Tate, Kunsthistorisches Museum, National Gallery of Art and the Smithsonian Institution.

“We are excited to be investing in a new vertical market in Cultural Collections Management,” said Mark Miller, CEO, Volaris Group. “Gallery Systems provides enterprise solutions to a market with unique needs, making it a great fit with the Volaris portfolio of companies.”
